GENERAL NELSON A. MILES DROPS DEAD

FAMOUS CIVIL WAR VETERAN SUCCUMBS AT RIPE OLD AGE

Captured Jefferson Davis
President of the Southern Confederacy In Civil War and Held Him At Fortress Monroe—Married An Ohio Woman.

General Nelson A. Miles, famous American soldier, dropped dead at Washington D. C., Friday. Death occurred while General Miles was attending a circus performance. The general had apparently been in the best of health.

General Miles was 86 years old, but despite his advanced age, he had taken his usual interest in public affairs until Friday. When he started for the circus performance there was no hint of an impending illness.

The old Indian fighter was sitting on the third row of the circus stands when he fainted and fell into the arms of Dr. Arthur W. Craig, who was immediately behind him. Dr. Craig and others removed him to a position under the seats and then to a point outside the tent, where he died.

The general was accompanied by Mrs. W. B. Noble, his daughter-in-law, and several of his grandchildren. The opening pageant of this circus had just begun when he collapsed.

Many of those sitting nearby did not recognize the distinguished soldier, and it was some time before the news of his death became generally known. The performance of the circus proceeded.

Intimates of General Miles recalled that his brother died with similar suddenness 13 years ago. The incident was unusually dramatic. General Miles recognizing the body of Lafayette park as he was strolling thru after the day's work at the war department. The general took the body up in his arms and carried it to an automobile.

By a coincidence General Miles was stricken while witnessing a performance participated in by Indians, many of whom knew by personal contact of his prowess as a foe.

The general lived in an apartment house in Washington with a daughter, the wife of Colonel Samuel M. Reber, retired. Recently he had spent a great part of his time mingling with old friends at the Army and Navy club and in playing golf and taking hikes over the city and surrounding country.

General Miles was born in Westminster, Massachusetts, in 1839 and married Mary Hoyt Sherman of Cleveland in 1868. He gained fame in the Civil war, where he was wounded four times while participating in some of the bloodiest battles of that conflict, including Antietam and Chancellorsville. He pursued General Lee's soldiers to Appomattox and held Jefferson Davis, president of the Southern Confederacy, at Fortress Monroe after the war. Later in the '70's he gained additional fame by fighting the Indians in the west and finally was made Lieutenant general.

Lieutenant General Miles was one of the "boy generals" of the Civil war. At the age of 25 he had risen from the rank of first lieutenant of volunteer to that of major general and was commanding an entire army division of 25,000 men.

From a clerical position in a Boston business house, he entered the army at the age of 22 participated in more than 39 of the severest engagements of the Civil war, was four times at the point of death from wounds and emerged from the great struggle the possessor of many enviable citations for bravery and distinguished service. Continuing in the army, he fought and pursued Indians on the great plains for more than 20 years, led the army of occupation at Porto Rico during the Spanish-American war and although retired when the United States entered the World war, he was ready and eager to participate once again in the service to which his life had been devoted.

General Miles received his first military training at the hands of a former officer of the French army who eked out a livelihood in Boston by teaching a number of young men the tactics employed by the French army.

The Name of Miles is woven into the romance of the west. He met, fought and defeated the Cheyennes, Comanches and Kiowas in the southwest. He chastised and subjugated the Sioux in the northwest, driving Sitting Bull out of his country. He made a forced march of 160 miles in the winter of 1877, when the temperature at times dropped to 40 degrees below zero and captured Chief Joseph and his Nez Perces who had long caused the government trouble.

Crazy Horse, Lane Deer, Spotted Eagle, Elk Horn, Natchez, Broad Road and other Indian chiefs quailed before his advances. Geronimo and his bloody Apaches, when chased and cornered by Miles refused to capitulate unless they could do so to Miles personally. He conquered the last great Indian uprising in 1890, during which Sitting Bull was shot, and the other rebellious Indians meekly surrendered when they heard that it was the "Big Chief Bear Coat," who was on their trail.

Pendulum Burglar Gets

Little for Acrobatics

New York.—The "pendulum burglar" made his first appearance in the exclusive Columbia university section and performed a stunt that police said was entirely new to them. He went into the basement of a six-story apartment house and cut the dumb-waiter rope at the bottom.

He then went to the roof, by the stairs and through the scuttle, and pulled up the severed rope, which remained firmly attached to the little house on the roof. Carrying it to the edge of the roof, he dropped over, thus providing himself with a means of swinging himself to the windows of several apartments.

As it happened, his daring ingenuity netted him only $12, as he was frightened away after entering only two apartments.

During the first league assembly the dog became a favorite of such statesmen as Hjalmar Branting, premier of Sweden; Lord Robert Cecil, Briland, Dr. Fridtjof Nansen and others.

Diarrhea Dreaded
Disease in Chicks
Prevention Is Best Control Measure, Says Expert.

White diarrhea or the bacillus type is a disease that is dreaded in the poultry business. With the baby chick season here it is a good idea to look the breed flock over before hatching from them. This form of diarrhea is inherited from the hen. When it appears, separate the affected chicks from the flock and feed plenty of sour milk, as this is one of the best preventives for this disease. There are also preparations on the market that will do good, but remember that in poultry disease work, it's always better to prevent a disease than cure it, advises D. H. Hall, extension poultry husbandman, at Clemson college.

Another form of diarrhea is caused by allowing the brooder to become too hot, thus overheating the baby chicks. Diarrhea is followed by a pasting up of the vent and the baby chicks becoming weak, lifeless, droopy and finally death occurs.

Chilling will also cause baby chicks to have this trouble. If the brooder stove is allowed to go out and remain out for any length of time, the result is usually bad cases of diarrhea and heavy losses.

Overfeeding is the most frequent cause of diarrhea. The baby chicks do not need food until after 56 or 72 hours have passed. The first feed should be soft and easily digested. Feed small amounts but feed often. It is always better to underfeed rather than overfeed.

We can eliminate these troubles which cause a loss of 50 per cent of our baby chicks by adhering to the following rules:

Breed from fowls free from white diarrhea.

Keep brooders at right temperature at all times.

Give plenty of buttermilk each day.

Do not overfeed baby chicks.

Profits Are Increased
by Using Better Sires

"So much is heard nowadays regarding agricultural depression, that it is interesting to note how profits in dairying can be augmented by using only herd sires of high-producing ancestors," says W. R. Robbers, New Jersey state superintendent of advanced registry.

"The official records of the offspring of the Guernsey bull, Ne Plus Ultra, show that 34 daughters are each averaging 500 quarts more of milk a year than their mothers. At 20 cents a quart this means an increase of $100 a year. Many of the daughters are only two-year-olds and can be expected to increase this margin as they grow older.

"The significance of these facts is apparent when it is considered that the number of dairy cows in New Jersey might be cut in half if better bulls were used by all farmers instead of by only a few. The average production of milk in the state is 2,230 quarts per cow. The average of Ne Plus Ultra's 34 daughters is 5,450 quarts each. In other words, many farmers are using twice as much barn space, pasture, and labor, and nearly twice as much feed as they ought to for the amount of milk they have to sell.

"This condition can be remedied by using bulls of proved ability to beget offspring of high productive capacity."

Get After Old Pastures

This is the time, the place, and the job. Let's go after these old make-shift pastures, get out the brush and trees, except an occasional tree for shade, get off the surplus water, weeds, etc., and put in real nutritious, palatable grasses and cultivate and fertilize these until at least two blades of grass grow where one grew before. Pasture for three and two to eat it is a mighty good old slogan. Let's try and make it a reality.

Farm Hints

Are you keeping accounts? It pays.

Spoiled silage should never be fed to horses or mules.

Testing seed corn will pay high wages for the time employed.

Tip to fruit growers: Feed your trees if you want them to feed you.

Sow some alfalfa this spring. It is the best all-round forage on the farm.

Test seed corn for germination and do not plant any ears which show low germinating qualities.

Repair farm machinery, harness, etc., and have everything ready for the rush of planting.

Leaving the stable manure exposed in the barnyard is one way some farmers have of throwing away money.

Are you making plans for some good hog pasture? Alfalfa is the best; next come red clover, rape, a mixture of rape and oats, and sweet clover.

Bankers don't "guess" what their balances are. Why should farmers "guess" about their farm results instead of keeping records as bankers are doing?

COCONUT BOMBS
FOUND IN LIBRARY

Honolulu.—When a new librarian, Albert Pierce Taylor, took charge of the public archives here a short time ago he stumbled over an old chest tucked away in a corner.

Taylor, a former newspaper man, wanted to know all about it. The box contained relics of the overthrow of the monarchy, he was told by a veteran assistant; exhibits held for the long-delayed hearing of claims against the American government by British subjects imprisoned when Queen Liliuokalani was dethroned.

"But what are these three old coconuts doing in here?" Taylor wanted to know, as he rummaged through the trash. No one could answer, and the librarian was about to toss the aged palm seeds away when he took second thought and telephoned for the advice of some army officers.

The coconuts were taken carefully out to Fort Shafter and still more carefully pried open. Enough dynamite was found in them to have blown the archives building into the extinct crater of Punchbowl.

Taylor had unearthed a few of the revolutionists' home-made bombs.

Ominous

"Why do you want to excuse that juror? He says he will give your client a fair trial."

"And I believe he would do it, too," whispered the lawyer with some agitation.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

LEXINGTON PLANS
TWO CELEBRATIONS

Founding of City and Visit of Lafayette.

Lexington, Ky.—This historic old city, famous as the home of Henry Clay, the great pacificator; seat of Transylvania college, the oldest institution of higher learning west of the Allegheny mountains; capital of the far-famed blue grass region and hub of the horse world, is preparing to celebrate on an elaborate scale the sesquicentennial of its founding and the hundredth anniversary of the visit here in 1825 of the Marquis de Lafayette, French hero of the American Revolution.

It is proposed to stage as one of the outstanding features of the program an elaborate historical pageant depicting many scenes of pioneer life in connection with the early settlement of the city and the major events which have illuminated the interesting history during the century and a half of its existence.

Another feature will commemorate the visit of General Lafayette here 100 years ago, on which occasion he was tendered a public reception at old Transylvania and was wine and dined by the little blue grass society. Officials of Transylvania college are interesting themselves in this feature of the program and in this connection it is proposed to invite the French ambassador at Washington with members of his suite.

It is also planned to bring here some speaker of national prominence to deliver a eulogy on the life, character and achievements of Lafayette in connection with American independence.

Mrs. W. T. Lafferty, Kentucky historian, who supervised last year the pageant in connection with the one hundred fiftieth anniversary of the founding of Harrodsburg, the first settlement in Kentucky, has offered her services to assist in preparing the pageant for the Lexington celebration and it is proposed that many of the descendants of the early pioneer families, who took part in the stirring incidents of the early settlement of Lexington and the blue grass country participate in the program.

Reunion of Boone Family.

Still another feature which is being considered in connection with the celebration is the proposed reunion of the Boone family, descendants and kindred of Daniel Boone, Kentucky pioneer and mighty Indian hunter. Members of the Boone family have offered to change its proposed reunion in Philadelphia to Lexington if invited to do so.

A representative of this family has written to officials here stating that 5,000 invitations would be sent to the various connections of the Boone family for the reunion and that a large majority of them would undoubtedly come to Lexington for the event.

The plans of the promoters of the celebration also contemplate bringing here for the occasion Frank Warren Coburn of Lexington, Mass., and Charlemagne Tower of New York to speak at the celebration. Mr. Coburn is an authority on the history of the battle of Lexington; and this city, having been named for the Massachusetts town, in which that first battle of the revolution was fought, it is regarded as eminently appropriate that Mr. Coburn be on the program.

Mr. Tower is probably the greatest living authority on the life and achievements of Lafayette, and an address from him would be very timely in the opinion of Chairman Wilson.

Date Set First Week in June.

The proposed celebration is to be staged the first week in June, as it was in that month, 150 years ago, that the hardy pioneers who settled Lexington received the first news of the initial battle in the little Massachusetts village which opened the struggle for American independence. These pioneers were camped about what has since been known as Maxwell spring, in the southern section of the city, near where the new $200,000 stadium of the University of Kentucky now stands.

The promoters of the celebration, due to this fact, are considering holding the pageant, which is to feature the celebration, in this new stadium, which overlooks historic Maxwell spring, and which has a seating capacity of more than 10,000.

While this suggestion has not yet been acted on, it is quite likely that the general committee in the next few days will visit the stadium and the nearby spring, from which the pioneer settlers drank and where they received the patriotic inspiration which prompted them to give their camp the name of Lexington, with the view of staging the main feature of the celebration there.

Havoc by Sea Disaster

The explosion and conflagration at Halifax, Nova Scotia, December 6, 1917, was caused by the collision of two ships, one carrying a cargo of war munitions. The total destruction covered 2 1/2 square miles. This catastrophe was followed by a blizzard, greatly hampering the work of rescue. One thousand one hundred and fifty-eight dead bodies were recovered, 4,000 were seriously injured, 20,000 rendered homeless, and the property loss was estimated at $50,000,000. The French steamship Mt. Blanc, carrying munitions, collided with the Belgian relief ship Imo. The French captain was Captain Lemodit, the Belgian captain W. J. Harrison. The French steamer was accused of not having used proper signals.

The time is passed when the measure of the value of a memorial is quantity. I hope the time has come when that measure is quality. I care not whether the material be marble or granite, its future will be measured by the character of the design. It is quality that has preserved for us the finest examples in painting and sculpture. It is quality that will stamp our imprint upon cemeteries of the future. Simplicity, correct lines and proportions and proper ornamentation are the real fundamentals. A design that is right, material that is lasting, and perfect workmanship, spells success for the future of this industry and the beautification of the cemetery. Will you let me help you select the memorial for your lot. Call at show room. NO AGENTS.

Will-Power Overworked

Not many of the really important things of life are the result of personal will power. Sickiness certainly is not acquired by any exercise of the will. Loves comes phantasmalike, emotional, not by the will. Marriage occasionally is the result of will power, but usually it is following the line of least resistance toward comfort. Death comes, finally, and removes us from the stage to make room for another, even though one has a will like steel.—Exchange.

ASSEMBLY

Of Presbyterian Church of the United States Will Open
May 21st.

Columbus, May 14.—(U. P.)—Prayers and parliamentary maneuvers were being prepared in advance to prevent unbecoming fireworks on the floor of the assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A. opening here May 21.

Leaders of the denomination were arriving early and peace precautions were the order of the day. Everything possible will be done to prevent open quarreling between "modernists" and "fundamentalists," leaders said.

The possibility of keeping controversies of this kind completely out of the meeting, is remote, however, due to the subjects with which the assembly will have to deal.

Charges against the New York presbytery for "harboring" Harry Emerson Fisk, whose disbelief in Biblical miracles is contrary to Presbyterian creeds, and the selection of a moderator are almost certain to bring to the surface undercurrents of factional strife within the denomination.

Dr. Scott W. Smith, Chicago, one of the chief aides to the stated clerk of the assembly, said one of the peace moves would probably be to eliminate the nomination of moderator candidates on the floor of the assembly, assigning the nominating task to a sub-division of the assembly, perhaps the general council.

Resolutions of "prayers for peace" are being brought to the assembly by delegates from several midwestern presbyteries.

Horse No Flatterer

Because of the interest America takes in the young prince of Wales, and because the prince is so often thrown from his horse when playing polo, the following words of Ben Jonson, "Rare Ben," who lived 1574-1637, are of special significance, and show that "horse sense" is the same in all centuries:

"They say princes learned no art truly but the art of horsemanship. The reason is the horse is no flatterer. He will throw a prince as soon as his groom."

TEN YEARS IN THE "HOME TOWN" NEWSPAPERS

United States Rubber Company
Celebrates Tenth Anniversary of a Pioneering Advertising Program.

In 1915 there were 2,445,666 automobiles in this country.

It seemed a tremendous number.

Some people were already talking about "the saturation point" being not far ahead.

But if there were some men who couldn't see the woods for the trees, there were others whose faith never faltered.

It took a lot of vision for them to see that the true market for the automobile had hardly been touched.

It took a lot of courage for them to bank on the ultimate success of the automobile in that market.

They had both. Back in 1915, the United States Rubber Company said "The real future of the automobile is not in the big cities, but in mile after mile on country roads."

So back in 1915 the United States Rubber Company began to prepare for this movement—and to help it.

1915—ten years ago—the first U. S. Tire advertising began to appear in the "home town" papers.

Few people saw these papers in their true dimension.

Few realized the influence they had on what the people thought and did and wore and bought. Because few people realized the place they filled in the minds and lives of their readers.

The United States Rubber Company saw.

As clearly as it saw that the development of the automobile would be in the smaller communities, it saw that the people in these communities would have to have tires to measure up to the service and tire merchants to sell them.

And it saw that in the "home town" newspapers it had, ready to hand, the medium to help it put tire merchandising where it would have to be in the new era of the automobile.

So ten years ago the people began to read the first U. S. Tire Advertising in their "home town" paper—over the name of their "home town" dealer.

They have been reading it ever since.

They have seen these home dealers develop their little "side line of tires" into real business—always with the support of "U. S." Advertising in these local papers.

Co-incident with the tenth anniversary of "home town" advertising by the United States Rubber Company, this company announces another long step forward in the perfection of automobile tires—the greatest since the introduction of the cord itself—in its perfected Latex treated—Web Cord Royal Balloon Tire with the flat low pressure tread.

Today there are 16,000,000 automobiles in this country.

80 per cent of them are owned by men and women on the farms and in the smaller communities.

Where there was one U. S. tire dealer in the small towns then there are hundreds today—real merchants.

What was only a vision in 1915 has come true in 1925.

Always a Remedy

There is some help for all the defects of fortune, for if a man cannot attain to the length of his wishes he may have his remedy by cutting them shorter.

Flintlock Guns

The first flintlock gun was made about 1550. Perhaps the first flintlock guns made in the United States were made at Lancaster, Pa., and they were used quite extensively in the days when Indians were in Pennsylvania.

Public Schools Sending Fewer Girls to Vassar

Poughkeepsie, N. Y.—Ten years have wrought changes in the characteristics of Vassar college students, charts prepared by the college office show.

In 1914 a total of 58 per cent of the students prepared for Vassar in public high schools and only 42 per cent in private schools. By 1920, the public schools were furnishing 35 per cent.

Registration lists in 1916 were closed two and a half years before entrance. Students entering in the classes of 1925 were registered four and a half years in advance.

Quite as extreme changes were found in subjects required for entrance. In 1865, entering students were examined only in algebra, Latin and French. In 1920, five subjects were required, and twelve were on the alternative or elective lists.

Explorer Finds Unknown Hot Lake in Cascade

Bellingham, Wash.—Incredible as it may seem, there still are apparently undiscovered bits of land, little nooks, lakes and the like where civilized man has not set foot.

Local United States forest officials were surprised a few days ago to learn that a hot lake of 40 or 50 acres in extent had been discovered in the high open of the Cascade mountains about 20 miles south of the Canadian border. They had not known such a lake existed, they said, although they had supposed they knew, at least from a distant view, every square mile.

A young man, who in exploring in the mountains found the lake, estimates the temperature to be 112 degrees Fahrenheit. The forest officials are preparing to investigate further and "put the lake on the map."

Burial Place of "Bird Woman" Found

Washington.—A century-old question was cleared up with the announcement by the bureau of Indian Affairs that the final burial place of the Shoshone Indian "bird woman" is located at Fort Washakie, Wyo.

This decision was reached by the bureau after an inquiry lasting about three months. It was prompted by a controversy among American historians as to whether the "bird woman" who attained fame as a guide of the Lewis and Clark expedition in 1805, was actually buried in the grave at Fort Washakie marked with a tablet in her memory.

AMUSEMENTS

When "Hot Dog" a novelty film comedy acted entirely by small animals, comes to the Met theater tonight, motion picture fans will have a chance to see the greatest thing that was ever made for the silver screen. It concerns a romance in which the heroine is impersonated by a White Highlander and the hero by one of the most intelligent bulldogs in the world.

"Hot Dog" is a most genuine cinema in which no human beings appear, but instead there are dogs, rabbits, monkeys, cats, turkeys, chickens, apes and a white rat all dressed up as people. It took two years to train the various animals before production was started. The settings are in a miniature village built especially for this purpose and there is a real plot in which the villain kidnaps the bride and escapes with her to the city.

He takes her to a cabaret where a jazz band composed of rabbits play the latest musical numbers and a score of chickens perform as dancers.

The prospective bridegroom pursues in a miniature automobile which in resemblance is not very much unlike a Ford, but is evaded when the runaway couple board a train operated entirely by monkeys. There is a train wreck, leaving disaster in its wake, and final romantic reconciliation with the bride returning to the wedding.

During a preview of "Hot Dog" recently, critics were unanimous in praising this novelty feature as a great addition to the screen. Until now, they pointed out, only one animal occasionally was sufficient wonder for audiences, but now that "Hot Dog" is released public taste will change to a liking of more films of this sort.

Brain Sharpest at 16, British Professor Finds

London.—Human intelligence appears to reach the maximum at the age of sixteen years, according to deductions set forth in a book by Godfrey H. Thomson, professor at Armstrong college, Newcastle-on-Tyne. These deductions, it is explained, were made after careful research of a mass of statistics on the subject, and indicate that a person may add to his book learning and his knowledge of the world as the years go along, but that he will never have a sharper brain with which to tackle problems than when somewhere about the age of sixteen.

Professor Thomson asserts: "Of the majority of cases it can be said that an intelligent man was intelligent as a child. If he did not show it in school it was the result of his teachers. It simply means that no lesson was so presented to him that he would take an interest in it."

Report Gold Deposits

It is reported that gold and silver deposits have been discovered sixty miles from Mistassini, in the Lake St. John (Canada) district, according to word received by the provincial government. The exact value of the ore is unknown, as the samples have been sent to the assayers in that district.

Varying Laundry Methods.

"Rub-a-dub-dub" is the litaney of the tub, supplanted in part by an anti-tonomy of washing machine in the modern American home. In Italy and Sardinia you may greet your linen being washed in public troughs along the streets, and in Normandy your clothes are dipped in flowing streams, placed on rocks, and pounded with paddles until you have visions of your little pearl buttons floating back to the mollusks whence they came," says a bulletin of the National Geographic society. "The round little Dutch woman's wash tub is to be found almost anywhere you turn. Along the canals, at the water troughs and boat landings the roly-poly pink-cheeked mother washes the pink and blue cottons of her Adolf and Wilhelmina in these stationary dish pans and wash tubs of hers."

Look!

a double boiler

You've used double boilers, of course, and know how safely cereals and other delicate foods can be cooked in them. The famous Fresh Air Oven of the Estate Gas Range is built exactly like a double boiler, and distributes heat in the same way. No more "humps"—no more scorching—instead, pies and cakes and cookies that melt in the mouth. It's different—this Estate oven—but it's founded on a principle as old as the double boiler. Let us show you how it works—today.

"Dear Old Mother"

She had traveled many miles to spend a few weeks with her mother. She referred to her as "my aged mother, who is growing old and can no longer keep house as she used to keep it," adding with a trace of tears, "I cannot hope to have my mother very long now, so I let Jack and the boys manage the best they can—this is a duty that soon I may be unable to perform," says the Eldorado (Kans.) Times.

That was six years ago. Three weeks ago the aged mother, bedlammed out of reason, with many frills and smiles, was one of the gayest souls on the Kafir Korn Karnival midway, dancing nimbly as a band played jazzily. She is a bride.

School Ferried Far

Taking a schoolhouse off dry land, floating it through canal locks and towing it seven miles across Puget sound to a new location on an island, was the unusual feat accomplished recently by a firm of contractors in Seattle, Wash., says Popular Science Monthly. The schoolhouse originally was situated on the shores of Lake Washington, adjoining Seattle. With powerful winches and screwjacks operated simultaneously, the building was raised off the ground and skidded on rollers onto a large barge. Two tugs then towed the school through Lake Washington canal to Puget sound. The school arrived undamaged.

Chimpanzee in Church

The congregation of a church at Montecito, a fashionable suburb of Santa Barbara, Cal., was thrown into near panic by the appearance of a huge chimpanzee which walked calmly down an aisle and seated itself in a pew. The big simian was a pet of a member of the millionaire colony and had escaped from its home two hours before.

Valuable Paper Weight

After being used for years as a common paper weight, what is said to be the largest sapphire in the world has been taken from India to London. The jewel is worth more than $95,000, weighs 916 carats, and is in the form of a plucked flower with a short stem. It was acquired by a government official in India who, ignorant of its value, used it as a paperweight in one of the guard huts on the Indian frontier. The discovery of the jewel was made by the director of Indian revenue when he visited the outpost. Its history has been traced to the Twelfth century when one of the Bellalla kings, while on a pilgrimage to Ceylon, was given the sapphire by a Buddhist monk. During the reign of this king the stone became the object of much veneration and was afterward captured by Malik Kafur, the great general of Allaudan. Later it came into the possession of a state official, but was lost about 1875. Experts are of the opinion that the jewel was a hair ornament of an ancient deity, and there is, it is believed, a companion stone in existence.

12,000 Public Utility Workers Join Employers For Protection Involving Millions Of Dollars

The latest and most important insurance transaction of a public utilities organization is that of the Public Service Corporation of New Jersey, which recently insured its 12,000 men and women workers for a total coverage of between $15,000,000 and $16,000,000. This corporation provides local transportation, electricity and gas to communities throughout New Jersey.

The Prudential Insurance Company of America issued the insurance. It provides protection to all employees who have been in the company's employ for a year or more, the minimum insurance being for $1,000 without physical examination, and at an extremely low rate. There are 12,000 now eligible, and 4,000 more to be included as they complete a year's service.

In the above photograph, two of the company's linesmen are shown receiving their applications for a share in this protection.

There are now more than 8,000 employers in the United States carrying group life insurance for two and a quarter million employees and their four and half million dependents. Many of these policies are upon public utility organizations.

The world has taken to rolling so rapidly of late that the most interesting things occur and are finished up and forgotten before we have time to observe and remember them. Great events flash by, like country stations seen from the last platform of an express train. Easy Thing to Work
A traveler staying at a small hotel wished to catch an early morning train and asked the proprietress for the loan of an alarm clock. YESTERDAY'S SOLUTION—

Tomorrow another Cross-word Puzzle will be published along with solution of today's problem.

Breaking It Gently

By FRANK WALL

THERE were times when Layson McCormick, head of the wholesale lumber house of that name, felt strongly inclined to break the rule of his firm that no employee must be fired except for murder or something desperate like that. He glanced at Miss Beggs and sighed.

Well, there were other ways. "Miss Beggs," he said gently.

His secretary roused herself from a pleasant day-dream. "Yes, dearie," she murmured absent-mindedly.

"Please take a letter," snapped McCormick. "To Jamstevich Bamgozium, 1234 Ornithierichus Building, Eusopoedia, Pa.," he said blandly. "While psycho-analysis is not, metaphorically speaking, an integral part of our activities, we are pleased to elucidate your query. Psycho-analysis is a kind of vivisection of the subjective faculties, whereas metaphysics is the science which circumambulates about non-existent abstractions."

"Let me have that right away, Miss Beggs," he added.

"Gee!" murmured Miss Beggs reproachfully as she went to her desk. Thereafter for about five minutes there was an intermittent tapping on her typewriter, broken by periods of eloquent silence; but at last she brought the letter to her chief.

"You're very slow," he said sharply. "I wanted this right away."

"Bit peeved, aren't you?" said Miss Beggs mildly. "Don't mind me."

McCormick was reading the letter. "Yamskill O'Witch Bamgozies, 1234 Ornerywinkus Building, Euseapoodle, Pa. While sikonallisis is not metterferically speaking an integgeral part of our activities we are pleased to lucydate your queery. Sikonallisis is a kind of vivisection of the subjective faculters, whereas metterferissis is the science which shirks a perambulator about non-existent substractions."

"There isn't a mistake you could have made that you haven't made," growled McCormick.

"Kind of thorough," said Miss Beggs, and she faded away into one of the day dreams.

McCormick regarded her thoughtfully. She was plain in every way in which a girl can be plain, but her face usually had a look of good-humored shrewdness which made him like her in spite of herself. Just at present though her expression was one of rapt foolishness.

McCormick tore the letter fifty ways at once and threw it into his waste-paper basket. "Miss Beggs!" he said sharply.

Her head turned slowly, but she did not speak. She was too far gone in dreamland to come back all at once.

"Miss Beggs!" he shouted. "Oh, Miss Beggs!"

And just when the attention of every one in the office had been attracted she looked up at him. "Yes, lovey?" she murmured.

McCormick tore his hair. "Take this away and drown it!" he muttered. "Oh, ye gods, what have I done to deserve this?"

"Take another letter," he said explosively. "I'll give you the name and address presently."

He sat drumming with his fingers for a moment and then: "I regret to have to inform you," he dictated in a level voice, "that your work recently has been characterized by sheer stupidity. It is unfortunately the rule of this house not to dismiss employees for stupidity."

Miss Beggs was wide awake now. She rose, gathering her notebook and pencil, and looked him straight in the eyes. "I'm sorry, Mr. McCormick," she said in a low voice. "You got me on a lot of unusual words that time and I've been day-dreaming a lot, too."

And then, man like, and perhaps because he'd always had a kind of liking for this queer little secretary of his, he rushed to the other extreme. "I'd no right to speak that way," he said. "Suppose we both forget, will you? I haven't any more letters just now. Will you tell my son I'd like to see him?"

"I'm leaving on Saturday," she said wistfully.

"Ah!" said McCormick, and in that monosyllable he expressed a whole dictionary of joy and relief. "Er—I hope your decision isn't final, Miss Beggs?"

"Well . . . I got married last week-end. . . ."

"I wouldn't try to dissuade you for the world," he said hastily. "If you've made up your mind to go, we'll have to manage somehow. I'll never have a secretary like you again," he said earnestly.

And she gave him that queer little likeable smile that made her homely face so charming at times. "It's very nice of you to say that," she murmured.

"I'll tell you one thing," he said, and he really meant this: "I may have a more efficient secretary, since we're trying to be frank to each other, but I'll never have one who'll stand my moods and tempers so splendidly as you have. As a private secretary, you're the best-tempered girl in the office."

And this time she fairly beamed at him. "An even temper is a good quality for a wife to have," she said thoughtfully.

"You bet it is."

"It's a pretty good quality for a daughter-in-law, too, isn't it?"

And when he didn't reply: "Jack was scared to break the news to you," she said smilingly.

His Inquiry

Gap Johnson of Rumpus Ridge was struck by a motor car while in the county seat town lately, knocked over backwards, and before he could scramble up was struck by another car and flung headlong. By the time he had about halfway struggled to his feet again he was hit by still another car and thrown gally-winding.

"Say, looky yur!" he yelled as he lay on his back in the track, "what in roaring, sizzlin' torment do you cusses think you're try to do, anyhow—play 'Two-old-cat'?" — Kansas City Star.

He Overheard the Conversation

By JESSIE H. ERNST

STANLEY TOWNSEND wondered whether he really loved Gloria Ganes. He had many symptoms but he wasn't positive. A great importance seemed to cling to anything she admired. There was always joy in being with her and loneliness in not seeing her.

That night he had an engagement to take her to dinner. It was Sunday. It had proved a dull day. He paid a few unimportant calls and then went to his club. It was almost six o'clock. He was just getting into his overcoat to go home to dress when he encountered Harry Clark, a fellow member and a casual friend. Clark was also about to leave.

"I'll walk a way with you, Townsend, if you wait a few seconds. I've promised to telephone a girl about a party she is arranging. But it won't take me a second," Clark bellowed a telephone number to the switchboard operator. It was Gloria Ganes' number. Townsend gasped, choked and waited. The telephone booth was right next to him. Clark's voice from inside came through the glass door and could be plainly heard. "Anything for papa's pet?" Clark was saying. "Oh you beautiful doll! Let me kiss away the blues! I'll be there tomorrow night with bells on, and you'd better put a court plaster on that mole!"

Clark put down the receiver and with a radiant smile of satisfaction opened the door of the booth. Townsend uttered a few banal words, "Forgotten engagement, I've got to hurry on."

Clark nodded good naturedly and picked up a magazine. "Ever read this article on being positive?"

Townsend flung a curt "No," and hurried out.

Being positive! It was remarkable how a simple thing will accomplish what weeks of mental debate will not. Marriage versus celibacy. In less than two minutes his admiration for Gloria Ganes had been killed and he was now quite positive that he did not want to marry her or anyone else.

He would take her to dinner but that would end their friendship forever. He had often heard others talk of the torture of disillusion. Townsend felt that at last he knew the reality of it.

He was cold and distant when Gloria entered the drawing room in her shimmering gown of mountain haze and silver. He helped her on with her evening coat without the usual tremble that made his hands awkward. He suggested the restaurant they dine at, instead of waiting for her suggestion. He pointed out to the headwaiter the table that he wanted, instead of waiting timidly to be shown to the worst table in the room. When he asked Gloria what she wished to eat and she said "You order," he did, and ordered everything he wanted.

At last they were back in Gloria's drawing room and it was time to say goodnight. But Gloria went to the piano and started to play. Something dreamy and soothing. He lighted a cigarette, then put it out and felt for his pipe.

"I'm not going to see you any more. I want to say goodbye," he began. Gloria continued to play.

"Gloria, did you hear what I said?"

"Yes—"

"Doesn't it mean anything to you?"

"That you are not going to see me any more; that you want to say goodbye?"

"Yes—"

"You might see me again, accidentally."

"I'm not fooling."

"Are you leaving the city?"

"No. But something happened tonight to completely disillusion me with you."

"What happened?"

"I overheard your conversation with Harry Clark. He called you up from the club and quite accidentally I happened to be standing near him. Will you please stop playing that stupid music!"

"It's beautiful music. I mayn't be playing it as well as it should be played."

"I want your attention."

"I am listening. You said you were disillusioned with me, because you heard Harry Clark telephone me."

"Have you ever kissed Harry Clark?"

"I don't think so."

"Think so! Don't you know?"

"We're awfully good friends. I've known him for years."

"If you knew me for years you'd kiss me?"

"Perhaps."

And then a strange thing happened. Some impelling emotion made Townsend take Gloria very roughly in his arms and kiss her lips with cruel ardor and desire. Gloria lay quietly, and unresisting.

When Townsend finally released her Gloria managed to say, "You weren't disillusioned; you were merely jealous."

The next day when Harry Clark telephoned Gloria she sparkled in transports of happiness over the wire. "You must have acted the part marvelously. He was terribly jealous. We got engaged last night. I've promised never to see you again."

"Perhaps some day we'll tell him. By the way, do you want that article back—being positive? I couldn't get him to read it last night."

"It's all right. He doesn't need it now."
